SUN YAT-SEN'S HEALTH "NOT GOOD," HE HAS SUBSTITUTE

Former Civil Governor Of Kwangtung Acting Chief

LATEST WAR TAX

Interesting News Notes From The Southern "Capital"

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, June 20.—Mr. Hu Han-min, former Civil Governor of Kwangtung and a senior member of the Kuomintang, is now acting for Dr. Sun Yat-sen at the General Headquarters in Canton. Dr. Sun, whose health is not good, requires much rest. Since Mr. Hu's return the Cantonese faction at the headquarters has regained much of its lost position. General Li Lieh-chun, a Kiangsi general who has been acting as Chief of Staff to the Generalissimo and directing much of the affairs of the General Headquarters, has been given leave of absence for recuperation at Ta-sha-tao. Mr. Liao Chung-hoi, chief of the department of labor of the Kuomintang party, has been appointed Civil Governor of the province, or rather of the 28 out of 96 Kwangtung districts which are not under the control of General Chen Chiung-ming. An effort is being made by Dr. Sun's elder followers to force Mr. Sun Fo, the Mayor of Canton, to resign, but so far this move has been unsuccessful.

The latest war tax forced on the people of Canton is a five per cent tax on sugar sales. The Canton Government is also imposing an extra likin of $3.50 on limestone exports from the North River district, in addition to the $17 per 100 piculs the miners already have to pay in taxes to eight different stations on their way to the market.

The Canton police arrested eleven sedan chair coolies and one native banker early last week for resisting Government measures. The coolies tried to refuse to pay the two dollars registration fee for each chair, and some of the native bankers doubted the fineness of the new 20-cent coins the Government is pouring in large quantities into the market. The banker has been released, but the coolies are still being held. There was difficulty last week with the chair coolies. In certain cases, brides had to be carried to the homes of their new parents-in-law by their ladies-in-waiting, because of the refusal of the coolies to take part in wedding processions owing to a threat by the Government to tax these processions as well.

A conference of the leaders of the mercenaries employed by Dr. Sun was held recently at Shek-lung. A report is current to the effect that they will no longer take any serious part in the fighting on the side of Dr. Sun, who is encouraging the Cantonese no longer to depend on imported hired troops.

Students recently dismissed from the Holy Trinity College and the Sacred Heart College in Canton are being joined by Government students in an agitation against missionary institutions. They are calling for more rigid supervision of foreign managed schools by the Chinese authorities.

The Kwangtung Cement Works, which was taken over some time ago by Yunnanese troops, has ceased operations.

Since June 7 the Canton Government Mint has been turning out large numbers of 20-cent pieces. For a few days the local market hesitated to circulate them, charges of low standard being responsible. The authorities are now offering a cash reward for information leading to the arrest of counterfeiters.

Peking Dust

A Daily Chronicle Of The Capital's Gossip And News

(By Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, June 25.—Yesterday morning a party of foreigners well known in Peking departed by mule litter for a two weeks' trip to Jehol, the ancient summer country place of China's Emperors. Emulating the old Empress Dowager herself, they refused to take the modern auto buses that would take them at least a part of the way, and began their journey on the mule litters.

They are the second party of foreigners to make the trip this summer, one party having preceded them last week. The first party, however, took the auto buses that run in that direction, going as far as they could—which was until the buses became stuck in the mud—when they resorted to mules and mule litters the remainder of the way. They expect to return by floating down the river, thus getting the benefit of all scenery possible as well as having much easier travelling.

In the party which left yesterday morning at sun-up, under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Carpenter, old Peking residents, were a number of ladies, including Mrs. Calhoun, widow of the former American Minister to Peking, and her guest, Miss Keeley, the daughter of James Keeley, the famous publisher of the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago Herald in days past. Mr. Keeley is now retired from the newspaper business, but his daughter expects to carry on the traditions of the family by writing her experiences on the mule litter trip to the ruins at Jehol.

Jehol, once upon a time, was the center of a great part of the Manchu's magnificence but in late years it has fallen into ruins and been stripped of most of its treasures. A large number of the specimens of China's ancient grandeur, including jewels, carvings, pottery and bronzes now in the Museum in the Forbidden City were brought to Peking from Jehol—which, by the way, is pronounced as though it were spelled 'Ro-ho'—but there are said to be some relics left there. The few parties of foreigners that have visited it have always succeeded in bringing back a few relics of their visit and the two parties now there, or on their way, are expected to be governed by precedent and bring back some art treasures.

The country about Jehol is said to be some of the prettiest in North China, the approach being through a pass cut in the rock. The former Imperial grounds are entirely surrounded by ranges of hills and the visitor's first impression is that he is gazing down on a gigantic ampitheater spread out under the sky with old Buddhist temples and ruined palaces studing the country-side as stage settings.

The old Imperial hunting grounds are surrounded by a high wall of twenty miles length and was formerly the play-ground of hundreds of elk and deer and other game. One of the Buddhist temples at Jehol was one of the largest in China, being about 200 feet long and wide and 11 stories high of alternate red, yellow and green color. The temple, like others in the vicinity, is noteworthy because of its castellated construction and has rows of pottery- Buddhas all about it.

The town of Jehol consists of one principal street that winds in and out among the hills surrounding the famous country palace of the Manchus and its population consists of over one thousand lamas and the Chinese who look after the palace grounds and descendants of the former caretakers.

Britain Not To Abandon Sudan, Lords Told On Eve Of Egyptian Premier's Visit

Viscount Grey Deplores Fact That Cromer's Work Was Proving Fruitless; Says Britain Must Not Give Up Control Of Suez

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 25.—The British Government has declared that it is not going to abandon the Sudan in any sense whatever.

This definite endorsement of the policy of previous Governments was proclaimed by Lord Parmoor in the House of Lords today in reply to a question. It assumes greater importance in view of the impending visit of the Egyptian Premier, Zaghlul Pasha, to discuss outstanding questions with Britain and the Egyptian demand for the cession of the Sudan.

An important contribution to the discussion on the subject in the House of Lords was made by Viscount Grey of Fallodoon, who, in the course of a striking utterance, deplored the fact that practically all Lord Cromer's splendid work in the administration of Egypt was gone or going. Viscount Grey insisted that the Egyptian Government should be made to understand that the right of protecting and administering the Suez Canal will not pass to it. We must also make it quite clear that Egypt will have no say whatever in the question of the Sudan. The only exception will be the question of the Nile waters, which is a case for a joint Egyptian and Sudanese Commission.

Lord Parmoor, giving the reassurance afore-mentioned, emphasised that Britain recognised that its obligations to the Sudanese were of such a character that no Government could abandon them without very serious loss of prestige.

Leaves Tonight; Will Shoot Big Game In Indo-China

Captain Pelletier d'Oisy and his mechanician, Sergeant Besin, heroes of the Paris to Tokio flight, returned to Shanghai from Japan yesterday by the steamer Suwa Maru and are tarrying here briefly en route home.

He will then proceed from Haiphong to Marseilles.

The plane which Captain d'Oisy took on from Shanghai after his own big machine had been wrecked in landing at Kiangwan, is being shipped back here from Tokio.

Labor Government Hopes To Aid Mothers And Widows Next

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 25.—A quarter of a million elderly persons will benefit by the result of the extension of the Old Age Pensions Scheme, which has obtained the approval of the House of Commons.

Mr. Philip Snowden, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, introducing the necessary financial resolution, said that single persons having means, not necessarily earned, of 25 shillings a week, will be entitled to a pension of 10 shillings a week. A married couple, whose income is 50 shillings a week, will be entitled to a sovereign a week jointly. The cost of this increase will exceed £4,000,000 for the first year, but will rise to £7,000,000. The proposals could in no way be regarded as a final settlement of the problem. Mr. Snowden said that he hoped shortly to submit a scheme for mothers' and widows' pensions and to reduce the age limit to sixty-five.

SUNDAY PICTORIAL

There is a vigor and sureness of stroke by the old Chinese artists that make them stand pre-eminent in the realm of art. And none with an eye to the innate beauty of Nature can gaze upon the works of the old masters without an irresistible conviction that the latter must have held silent communion with Nature and come under the spell of the vastness and solitude of the open spaces. Some capital specimens of landscape painting by two of the foremost artists of the early Tsing Dynasty will be found in next Sunday's issue of The China Press Sunday Pictorial.

When Miss Erna Lange, of New York City, won the 1923 John Armstrong Chaloner Art Prize, carrying with it a year's study in Paris, she was disqualified by the judges because they said her work, "Lament," bore a striking likeness to a painting done years before by James Williams, an English painter. When the 1924 prize winner was named Mr. Chaloner let it be known that he would also send Miss Lange to Paris at his personal expense.

Armed Desperado Holds Up Foreigner's Motor Car After Shooting Policeman

Chinese Gunman Makes Sensational Escape Into Settlement Following Tea Shop Affray In Chapei

Commandeering a motor car carrying a foreign passenger at the point of a pistol an armed Chinese desperado who had just shot two fellow countrymen—one of them a policeman—made his escape from Chapei into the Settlement yesterday evening after an exciting chase through the streets.

The shooting affray and subsequent flight of the gunman and hold-up of the automobile developed from a free for all fight among loafers in a tea shop at the corner of Jukong and Paoshan Roads, in Chapei. The Chapei police had warning of the impending fight and some police in plain clothes were in the tea shop at the hour specified for its start. The fighting began with a quarrel between two men and rapidly progressed to blows on the upper floor of the tea shop. The police then stepped in and a uniformed constable dashed up from the lower floor. His appearance was the signal for the gunman to go into action.

The man's first shot struck the policeman in the left side, inflicting a serious wound. Another bullet struck a civilian an attendant at the tea shop, in the foot. Waving his pistol in warning to pursuers, the assassin then dashed down the stairs and into North Honan Road Extension, turning toward the Settlement, with an excited throng in his wake. He kept a head of the chase until Boundary Road was reached, where the pursuit threatened to overtake him.

HOLDS UP CAPT BOYD

At this juncture a Ford hire car, driven by a Chinese chauffeur and conveying Captain Boyd, of the Pilots' Association, who was bound for the railway station, swung into Boundary Road from the East. The fugitive dashed across the street, leaped upon the running board and, crouching there, thrust his pistol at the chauffeur's head and ordered him to drive straight on or he would shoot. He then swung the pistol at Capt. Boyd.

Under the circumstances there was nothing for the chauffeur to do but obey orders, and he drove along Boundary Road to North Chekiang Road, where he turned to the South under instructions from his unbidden fare. When the car neared Haining Road corner the man deftly alighted from the running board and swiftly disappeared.

No alarm was raised in the Settlement and it was not until the motor car started back into the station roadway and was spotted by the swarm of Chapei police who had gathered there that notification was given the local police. The car was then taken to West Hongkew station, where the chauffeur was detained. He will appear in the Mixed Court this morning, when the Chapei police will probably bring a charge of aiding and abetting.

THREE ARRESTED

The two fighters who started the row at the tea shop were arrested by the Chapei police and later another man was also taken into custody.

The wounded policeman was taken to Paulun Hospital, and is said to be in a serious condition. The other bullet victim was not seriously hurt.

KLAN SUPPORT HURTS M'ADOO IN CONVENTION, DAVIS GAINS

Ex-Ambassador To England May Be Compromise

PLATFORM ROW

Delegates At Odds, But "Enforcement" Is Sure To Win

(BY UNITED PRESS)

New York, June 25.—The influence of the Ku Klux Klan has been thrown to the McAdoo side, with the result that the anti-Klansmen in the former Treasury chief's following are incensed to such an extent that they are demanding a platform plank either openly or indirectly condemning the Klan.

Both McAdoo and Smith apparently are losing strength, with former Ambassador Davis looming larger every minute as a compromise candidate.

Definite decisions have not been reached concerning the platform but it is now apparent that the party will come out flat footedly for prohibition enforcement; adherence to the league of nations; the world court; lower taxes; tariff reform; farm relief, and punishment of the guilty persons in the graft disclosures.

Comment on Senator Harrison's keynote speech is to the general effect that while he had plenty to say in condemnation of the Republicans he was unable to offer many Democratic alternatives.

(Reuter's American Service)

New York, June 25.—The Democratic Convention at present appears to be at sixes and sevens with regard both to platform and candidates. The resolutions committee all night long listened to arguments for and against America's joining the League of Nations and with regard to Prohibition, the Ku Klux Klan and other internal issues. Apparently no agreement on any of them was in sight when the committee adjourned. Judge Westcott in an impassioned address to the committee urged a platform in favour of joining the League, after which he fell fainting. Other speakers urged a referendum on the question of joining the League, while others favoured adherence to the League under conditions which would not endanger the sovereignty of the country. Some are of the opinion that Mr. McAdoo's chances of nomination have been injured by the refusal of the rules committee to change the rule, making a two-thirds vote of the delegates necessary for nomination, to a bare majority vote.

Senator Walsh of Montana has been elected permanent chairman of the Democratic Convention. In a speech he condemned the Republicans' sins of commission and omission, declaring that President Coolidge's party had palliated the offences of unfaithful public servants. "It is in this easy tolerance of turpitude that the real danger of free government lies." Senator Walsh advocated tariff repeal, relief of agriculture and general reform. He warned the Democrats against making the League of Nations the chief issue of the campaign.

(Reuter's American Service)

New York, June 25.—Mr. Owen Young, who was a member of the Dawes Committee, impressed on the platform committee of the Democratic Convention that the Democrats should take up a position regarding the attitude of the United States in relation to European politics. He subsequently accepted a resolution as correctly representing his position to the effect that "The United States should sympathetically co-operate with its former allies and the League of Nations, having in view the ultimate adhesion of the United States to the Covenant with proper reservations."

(Reuter's American Service)

New York, June 26.—Towards the close of the Democratic Convention yesterday a resolution was passed to hear the nominating speeches immediately as the platform committee was not ready to report. A delegate then began to nominate Senator Underwood. There was a demonstration when candidates hostile to Ku Kluxism were mentioned. Collisions with delegates unfavorable to Senator

Underwood resulted in bleeding noses. Brilliant orators submitted the claims of Senator Robinson and Mr. McAdoo. A rigorous demonstration followed continuing in the case of Mr. McAdoo until the adjournment.

TOKIO IS TO HAVE NEW SYSTEM TO AID GOVERNMENT

Under Secretaries And Parliamentary Vice Ministers Revived

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, June 19.—In order to facilitate the transaction of departmental business, especially in connection with its relations to the Diet, the Government has decided on the institution of a system of Parliamentary Vice-Ministers or Under-Secretaries, as well as on the revival of the old system of Department Councillors.

The Parliamentary Vice-Ministers, as the name implies, would have their duties in the Diet, and would understudy their Ministers in chief, like them depending for their tenure of office on the life of the Ministry by which they were appointed.

Side by side with these Parliamentary Vice-Ministers are to be so-called executive Vice-Ministers for each department, whose work would be that of the Permanent Under-Secretary in Great Britain, and whose occupancy of the post would not depend on ministerial changes.

It has been alleged that the creation of these additional posts has been prompted by the demand on the part of some of the Government supporters, belonging to the two major parties at least, for some of the spoils of the electoral victory last month.

Another change in administrative affairs tending towards the popularization of Government will arise from the decision of the Department of Foreign Affairs to issue occasional pamphlets, "papers," or "books" on pending diplomatic questions.

Coming on the top of the previous Government's effort to popularize diplomacy by means of public lectures by Foreign office officials, this new decision is significant to some extent of the change that is slowly but surely taking place in the conduct of public affairs.

An early decision at a Cabinet meeting shows that the Government is determined to redeem its pledge of extending the suffrage. It has been explained that the extraordinary session of the Diet meeting next week will be too busily occupied with financial matters to allow of any discussion on a franchise bill, but that when regular session opens in December such a measure will be definitely introduced by the Government.

Former Compradore Given Year's Term On Perjury Charge

Sentence of one year's imprisonment for perjury was imposed by Assessor Martin and Magistrate Kwan of the Mixed Court yesterday on Liang Zung-chien, for many years compradore of Butterfield and Swire. He retired from that position about six years ago.

The perjury charge was in connection with a previous Mixed Court case and had to do with the signature on a receipt for Tls. 5,000. The Court held that the signature was that of the defendant and in giving sentence stated that in view of the previous good character of the defendant and considering his advanced age an application for reduction or remission would be entertained. It is understood that such an application will be made this morning.

CONVICT PRINTER OF IMITATING FOREIGN LABELS

Nine-Month Sentence Suspended In Sun-Maid Raisin Case

For manufacturing labels in imitation of those used by the Sun-Maid Raisin Growers' Association, a Chinese printer named Tsang Soong-yue was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment by Assessor Jacobs and Magistrate Kwan at the Mixed Court yesterday, sentence to be suspended on signature of a bond and the publication of an apology by the accused in various Chinese papers.

Appearing for the accused, Mr. L. K. Kentwell stated that his client had a long and honorable career as a printer and had never been in trouble before. He understood that complainants had accepted an offer for the publication of an apology in the newspapers and he asked that whatever judgment might be given by the Court might be suspended.

Mr. J. W. Schoenfeld, for complainants, declared that the offense was a very serious one and they wished to discourage this sort of printing, of which there was a good deal. They understood that the accused had printed about 300,000 labels. Complainants, however, were willing to accept the offer of accused to publish an apology.

The Court ordered the confiscation and destruction of the labels and of the stones from which they were printed and sentenced the accused to nine months, sentence to be suspended on signature of a personal bond to be of future good behavior.

DEDICATE NEW GYMNASIUM, GIFT OF GENERAL LU

Handsome Building Opened At Hangchow Girls School Commencement

(China Press Correspondence)

Hangchow, June 24.—The commencement season at Hangchow is in full swing. Both the Hangchow Christian College and the Union Girls School have had their graduating exercises. The College graduated fourteen from their college department and fifteen from their middle school. The commencement address was delivered by Rev. Clifford M. Drury of Shanghai. Mr. Drury took for the subject of his address "The Money Changer" and gave a most interesting address. The commencement was marked by receptions to the graduating students, meetings of the alumni, and informal receptions and welcomes to visitors. The baccalaureate sermon was preached by Rev. Chu Sin-sen, of Soochow, the chairman of the board of directors. The salutatory address was given by Mr. H. D. Ling in English and the address of the valedictorian by Mr. Yu Yih-yuin in Chinese.

The commencement at the Union Girls School was marked first for the largest number of graduates in the history of the institution, and second by the dedication of the Lu Yung-hsiang gymnasium. There were thirty young ladies to receive diplomas, and before that there had been graduating exercises in the primary and kindergarten departments. The graduating exercises were held in the new gymnasium, a building which was built during the past year through the generosity of Governor Lu Yung-hsiang. Thanks to Governor Lu's generous gift the school now has a combination gymnasium and auditorium which adds greatly to its facilities and equipment for training the increasing number of young women who come into its classes each year. In addition to this new gymnasium the year has seen the addition of a handsome new dormitory which means much also to the facilities of the school, and makes it possible to take in a larger number of students.

The commencement exercises and the dedication of the new gymnasium was a combination which brought many guests and representatives of officialdom. Governor Lu was represented by Wong K'o-tsang, who delivered a message of congratulation to the graduating class. There were messages of a similar nature from other officials. This gift of the gymnasium to the Union Girls School is added proof of Governor Lu's identification with the best interests of the community.

Wayland Academy has issued invitations to the public to attend their commencement exercises on the 27th. They have a class of sixteen. A few weeks later the government schools will follow with their exercises also, which will mean the addition of several scores more to those who this year have finished their collegiate work.

French Monoplanes Have Test In Tokio

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, June 19.—At the Tokorozawa aerodrome and in the presence of some two hundred and fifty military and civilian aviators, among whom were Lieut. General Yasumitsu, Vice-Admiral Okada, and Lieut. General Nagaoka (retired), a demonstration was given by M. Barbot of the effectiveness of the light monoplanes which have been imported from France by the Mitsubishi Company.

At the same time at the Kasumigaura Naval aerodrome experiments are being made with a Japan-made aerial fish torpedo.

The visits of the American and French world-flyers have stimulated tremendous interest in aviation among all sections of the people, says the Asahi, which further asserts that the Imperial Civilian Aviation Association and also the Military Aviation Board are daily receiving contributions, ranging from one to ten yen, from individuals or from Associations and schools for the development of aviation in Japan. Most of the contributions are accompanied by an expression of the hope that the Government will take proper measures to complete the system of National Defence and especially the air service expansion programme.

While en route the coolie felt a sudden lurch to his craft and turning saw his fare in an apparently unconscious condition. He then proceeded to the nearest police station but the man was dead when he arrived. The body was later identified by a brother.

Japan To Have 6 Divisions Less

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, June 19.—A cutting down of the number of army divisions by six, with a redistribution of the personnel so as not to reduce the number of effectives, in order to provide funds for the improvements to be suggested by the Military investigation Board, which will shortly complete its labours, is an intelligent forecast of the proposals which the Minister of War is expected to announce in the near future.

The lessening of the number of divisions on the administrative side alone is estimated to yield available yearly funds to the amount of ¥30,000,000, and this money would be devoted principally to the development of the air arm and to adoption of and training in methods of chemical warfare.

Comparison

It is obvious that where claims are made, comparison is inevitable. Comparison of the NEW Columbia Grafonola with ordinary gramophones has given it a place in music that no other gramophone has attained in so short a space of time. Comparison of the "NEW PROCESS" Records (without Scratch) with ordinary records reveals all the deficiencies of the latter.

To hear either one is to enjoy but one-half of a great achievement. To hear them in combination is to experience the sensation of a new experience. But to hear them in comparison with ordinary gramophones is to understand the enthusiasm of master musicians and music-lovers alike.

This amount is made up of Y.40,000,000 for bonitos, Y.15,000,000 for mackerels, Y.60,000,000 for sardines, Y.40,000,000 for herrings, Y.10,000,000 for the yellow tails, and Y.235,000,000 for tunny and other kinds of fish. The Tokio Yamoto tells of a new plan to discredit American products and encourage the people to buy Japan-made goods. An organisation called the Nippon Sangyo Kyokai proposes to send its agents around the schools and colleges with samples of Japanese and foreign-made articles in order to show in the most convincing way which are the better. The people who buy imported goods, we are to suppose, says the Japan Chronicle, do so out of pure ignorance of real values, or else they insist on paying more for a poorer foreign article out of pure cussedness. Trade-exclusionists everywhere raise the same cry.

The Jiji says that foreigners are beginning to avoid the company of Americans, for fear of being involved in "incidents," and that at the Sanyo Hotel they ask the boys not to seat them near Americans. This is probably a pure invention. He would not be a very noble specimen who would thus invite the mob to go for the other fellow. One of the Kobe papers reported a much more agreeable case where a foreigner, asked whether he was an American, by some local patriots, pointed out to them the absurdity of asking people to tell them whether they were qualified as suitable for retaliation. The Jiji reports that Mr. Hutchison, of Thomas Cook and Son, Shanghai, has arrived in Japan on a trip to find out how much the boycott is likely to affect the tourist business.

The advertising pages of the German dailies have of late become so congested with "want" advertisements of matrimonial candidates that considerable ingenuity is now necessary to attract notice. A Leipzig manufacturer in financial difficulties tried the following gem: "I do long so much for a new mother, but she must be a really pretty mother. I am ten years old, and have a good daddy. We have a villa and plenty of furniture. But my daddy says a mother can only be a good mother if she has plenty of money." It is the old story of German marriage by auction.

Billy Tingle Retains His Bantam Title In Fast And Furious Bout With Canion

Boxing Program At Carlton Full Of Action; Syd Keenan Unintentionally Fouls De Dios In Semi-Final; Terrible Pete Wins; Japanese Gets Draw

By Westa

There was plenty of action in the Moscow end of Louie Lhdow's galloping godown last night. Plenty and then some. In fact if the Siberian gold diggers ever get their customers to trading chits for Mumm's extra dry as fast as the knuckle knockers swapped wallops at last evening's proceedings there won't be a bubble left in Louie's ice chest.

It was a rough party and the longer it went the rougher it got, with most of the customers on their feet at the finish yelping encouragement to the young men who were doing their best to commit mayhem. Fortunately there were no casualties that will not yield to proper surgical treatment.

The main squabble of the evening was between Billy Tingle and Rufe Canion; a twelve round bout for the bantamweight championship of the Orient. Tingle, the holder of this title, defended it successfully, although Rufe tried frantically to pry it loose.

KEENAN HITS A LOW ONE

Preceding the main event there was what the management announced as a special number with Syd Keenan and Faustino De Dios in opposite corners. This started off like a great fight—great for everybody except Syd, who stuck his chin in front of one of Faustino's fast ones in the first round with rather disastrous results, seeing that the impact left the usually smiling Syd standing upright on his hips on the canvas. It was a fearful clout and with anybody except the durable Keenan on the receiver's end there would have been a hurry call for an ambulance. Syd quickly recovered and after taking a count of nine in which to get his bearings was on his feet again. De Dios tried hard to follow his advantage, forgetting for a moment that the more Keenan is hurt the harder it is to put him away. Followed four fast rounds with fairly even fighting in three and with Syd getting rather the worst of it in the other, and then came an ending that was as unexpected as it was unfortunate.

The two boys were mixing it in Keenan's corner when all of a sudden Syd let fly with one that either was aimed too low or which Faustino knocked down and which caught the Filipino boy about a foot below the belt. De Dios went down in a crumpled heap, apparently in agony, and as it was apparent to all that his distress was caused by Syd's blow there was nothing for Referee Matty Smith to do but call a foul on Keenan, and award the decision to De Dios.

Syd was very much distressed, and with reason, seeing that it was the first time in his life that he had ever had a foul called on him. He said afterwards that while there was no doubt in his mind that he had hit low he could not understand how it happened. At any rate he seemed sincerely sorry and assured Faustino afterwards that it was an accident, which explanation was acceptable, both to Faustino and the customers.

GOOD BOUT SPOILED

It was too bad this happened, as this bout started off like a real fight. The two boys were evenly matched, both as to strength and skill, and were thumping each other merrily from the start. In the later part of the first round The Filipino unleashed a left that floored Syd cleanly, and again in the fifth he tore into Keenan with such fury that Syd gave every appearance of having lost half of his sails and all of his rudders, with the result that he was navigating with some difficulty. The rest interval put him back on an even keel, however, and he was moving along nicely with the tide when the end came.

The main event furnished a thrilling battle, particularly in the early rounds. Billy was very effective with left jabs, shooting them into Rufe's face with such rapidity and good effect that the Filipino's left eye was soon cut and half closed. That didn't seem to slow him up much, however, and if he had landed any one of the million or more wallops that Billy safely ducked or dodged there would have been a sad ceremony in this town today that would have ended with the lowering of the Australian flag to half mast. Ducking and dodging, however, are two of the best things that Billy does, in consequence of which the flag in question will continue to float proudly from the masthead, as usual.

BOTH BOYS GROGGY

There were stages in this bout when both of the boys were groggy, and hanging on for dear life. In fact it looked very much to Billy's friends and well wishers in the audience that it would have been sounder strategy on his part to have kept away, but then it is much easier to think of these things when you are sitting comfortably in a chair outside the ring than it is when you are in there face to face with a human wildcat who is striving to spill your life blood on the carpet, hey Billy?

Of the two performers in the main event Canion packs the harder punch but does not have it properly tamed as yet. His judgment of distance was very poor, many of his wallops being so wild and misdirected that they endangered the ticket chopper on the front door about as much as they did Tingle. Billy simply dived under them or walked around them, leaving Rufe groping round in the ring or tangled in the ropes trying to regain his bearings. On some of these occasions Billy walked up and plumped him another clout on the sore lamp, which added little, if anything, to the Filipino's peace of mind.

The decision of referee Matty Smith and the two judges, Messrs Rodger and Gertzberg, was well received.

The first prelim was between Kuba, a Japanese boxer, and Kid Fernan, which the referee called a draw.

After that Kid Pepe and Terrible Pete fought six awkward rounds, with the terrible one winning by thirtyseven wild swings and eighteen grunts. Pepe didn't like this decision very much; in fact he didn't like it at all, but it was fair enough.

Altogether it was a good program, with plenty of action all the way. There was hardly a minute from the first tap of the gong that didn't resound with the thump of a glove against a sweating midriff or a tousled dome.

Next week Kid Volaire and Johnny Hill will mix in the main event.

FIFTY-ONE WILL RECEIVE DEGREES AT ST. JOHN'S U.

Commencement Exercises Take Place Tomorrow Afternoon

Fifty-one students will receive degrees from St. John's University at the annual commencement exercises and conferring of degrees tomorrow at 5 p.m. This is the 45th annual commencement. Unless there is rain, the exercises will be held out-of-doors. Tea, which is at 4 o'clock for all visitors, will be held in the University library.

The speakers will be Mr. O. M. Green, editor of the North-China Daily News, and Dr. Carsun Chang, president of the National Institute of Self-Government. Dr. Chang's address will be in Chinese. The Rt. Rev. F. R. Graves will give the invocation, and the president of the University, Dr. F. L. Hawks Pott, will announce the prize winners for the year and award the prizes. Prizes are given for excellence in scholarship, debating, oratory, athletics and literary ability.

Before the awarding of the degrees, the Class of 1917 will present to the University a marble base to the sun dial on the campus, which has heretofore had only a concrete base.

There are 45 graduates from the College of Arts and Sciences, one from the School of Theology and five from the School of Medicine.

Commencement week began on Sunday, June 22, when the Rev. D. M. Koeh of Sungkiang delivered the baccalaureate address to the graduating class of the St. John's Middle School and the Rev. L. B. Ridgely of Nanking addressed the university seniors. On Wednesday afternoon the annual president's reception was held, and this afternoon the class day exercises of the university will take place. A foreign drama, Chinese drama, musical numbers and speeches are to be given.

The Middle School graduation exercises were held at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon, in Alumni Hall. Forty-one students received certificates of graduation. The speakers were the Rev. E. L. Sanford of Zangzok, headmaster of the Proctor School there, and Mr. Z. J. Li of the Commercial Press.

Mr. Jabin Hsu Addresses Rotary Club On The "Chinese Press"

An appeal for a portion of the balance of the American share of the China Boxer Indemnity to be used in the establishment of a high standard school of journalism for the education of Chinese newspapermen was made at the meeting of the Shanghai Rotary Club yesterday by Mr. Jabin Hsu, editor of the Shanghai Tribune and a member of the Chinese Ratepayers Committee.

Mr. Hsu spoke on the object of the "Chinese Press" and traced its beginnings from somewhere about 200 B. C. when the literati collected the laws for the emperor which were published in the form of bulletins and distributed over the land by couriers, down to modern times. About 1,000 years ago a Chinese blacksmith invented movable types and thereby preceded the German Gutenberg who has had the credit for this invention by many years. The first modern papers were started about 1872 in Shanghai, according to Mr. Hsu. The Shun Pao, one of the most important Chinese papers was started in 1874 and since that time many have followed but the greatest development has been since the coming of the Republic in 1911. There are now about 1,134 publications being issued regularly in China, of which number 550 are daily papers, 350 monthly and the remainder at irregular periods.

The Chinese press although young is becoming powerful in Mr. Hsu's opinion. But the troubles of the press are many. Most of the papers are unable to operate independently and are forced to subsist on official patronage or subsidy. Editors are generally underpaid and uneducated and subscriptions and advertising rates are too low to make the papers profitable enterprises. It is difficult to induce good men to go into the profession because of its lack of standing and opportunities.

In Mr. Hsu's opinion, if a portion of the American share of the Boxer Indemnity could be used in the establishment of a school of journalism, Chinese young men could be educated in accordance with the ideals of journalism prevalent in America and Britain and much good would result. "Journalism is a public service," the speaker declared and urged upon both Chinese and foreign business men the value of legitimate advertising, not only for the purpose of increasing business but in enabling the press to become independent of outside influences.

Next World War Will Be Fought Out By Industry, Says Bernard M. Baruch

America's War-Time Industrial Leader Urges Measure To Permit Mobilization Of Entire Resources Of Nation In Event Of Conflict

BY BERNARD M. BARUCH

"Taking the profit out of war" is a rather misleading slogan. It should be, "The Mobilization of Resources," a corollary to which is the elimination of war profits. What herein is said is the result of the work of my associates and myself in the War Industries Board during 1917 and 1918, when we were confronted with the problem of seeing that the fighting forces of the allied and associated nations got what they wanted when they needed it, without unnecessary dislocation of the industry of our country, unnecessary profit, or unnecessary suffering of our population.

As a result of that experience, I strongly recommend that legislation be put into effect that would give power to the President, in case of war or threatened war, to mobilize immediately the resources of the nation. That would mean the mobilization of men, money, materials, manufacturing facilities and maintenance—or food; the fixing of all prices; and the regulation and distribution of production.

In charge of the work an industrial strategist or board should be placed. I am opposed, however, to boards, except where final authority rests with the Chairman, as divided authority causes indecision, and indecision means defeat in war. The agency to put into execution the necessary legislation should be in existence and ready to be put into live being in case of war or threatened war.

MOBILIZING A NATION

This is about what would take place: The military authorities would put into effect a draft of the entire population, from which the required number of men would be drawn, and would place the necessary orders for equipment and material. The industrial strategist would then say from what industries the men should be taken, giving the draft boards a list of the essential and less essential industries, and what proportion of its peace-time quota each industry should be permitted to produce.

Prices of materials, commodities, and, in fact, all things would be declared fixed as of such and such a date, and it would be illegal either to buy or sell at a different price. A price-fixing board, or committee, would be immediately inaugurated for the purpose of making such changes in prices as became necessary. The machinery to make all this effective could be immediately set up, as was done during the war, through the State councils of defense.

Money would be mobilized in the same way as men and materials, because a price would be fixed at which money could be used, and the money would be allocated for the purpose of winning the war, just as in the case of men and materials. This would prevent any rise in prices, and would also prevent competitive bidding for labor.

Let me say here, parenthetically, that the difficulty during the last war was not so much with labor as with the departments of the Government, which bid strenuously one against another without any coordination. Even the departments within the army itself bid against one another. Labor, like money and materials, would be allocated under the new plan. Because the prices of the things that labor would have to buy would be fixed, there would be no necessity for demands for increased wages by labor.

WAR PROFITS FOR WAR

The excess proportion, if any, of the profits in industry and internal revenue would go to the prosecution of the war. Thus, you would not only take the profit out of war, and make even peace-time profits impossible by increasing all taxes for war purposes, but you would place all the resources of the country at the command of the war-making agencies. If such an organization which we were approaching at the end of the war had been put into effect at the beginning, the cost of the war, in my opinion, would not have been more than half of what it was, and there would not have been charges of profiteering and economic chaos after the war.

The industrial strategist at the head of the war supply board above described would organize each industry by a committee from the industry's own ranks, headed by a Government director. This Government director would have associated with him representatives of each of the great departments of the Government which were interested in obtaining products of this industry. The committee of the industry would be told by the Government what was required and the price to be paid, but the manner and method of production would be left to the industry so as to allow the freest initiative possible in the circumstances.

The fuel and oil industries, which were administered separately during the war, would be organized in the same manner as were the steel, copper, lumber and other industries during the war. The railroads would also be under the control of this strategy board; indeed, everything except food. Food should be administered separately.

TO PREVENT CONFUSION

The army and navy would determine the number of men required and the things needed, and would order those things. The industrial strategist would tell the departments where they could get the men with the least dislocation of the machinery required for the support of the troops. He would direct where the orders for material should be placed, but the inspection and receiving of the material ordered would be left to the departments. By specifying where orders should be placed, not only the dislocation of industry would be avoided, but also the jams that make delivery impossible.

After the war had proceeded but a few months, it became evident that the crowing of war orders into the usual well-known manufacturing plants would result in such a jam that there would be no deliveries. In such manufacturing districts as New England, New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh there was such enormous congestion of orders that it was not only impossible for the factories to turn them out but it was impossible for the railroads to carry the freight.

PRODUCING ESSENTIALS

Power companies also were unable to furnish all the power necessary for manufacturing, and even for street-car and lighting purposes. So bad was the outlook that many of the orders in those districts had to be reallocated to regions where the congestion was not so great. This condition would never have occured had such a board been in existence before the war as was created during the war and now outlined.

The industrial strategist, when the various needs were placed before him, would declare, by a system of priorities, where the men and the materials should be used, and, furthermore, he would say where they could not be used. There would be a stimulation of production by putting more men, more money and more transportation into the production or essentials, and a cutting off of demands by denying the use of men, money, materials and transportation to industries not engaged in war work.

Priority—which means giving to a certain industry or branch of government activity prior access to some requisite labor, service or material—was and would be the most important instrument in this work, because on it depends the allocation of men, money, materials and all other resources on the basis of their use toward the quickest winning of the war.

OPPOSED TO LABOR DRAFT

When I use the word labor I mean it in its broadest sense, and not in the narrow sense of those who labor wth their hands. I mean anybody who renders service, whether a lawyer, a doctor, a banker, or a merchant. All labor should be allowed as much freedom of action as possible in the circumstances. As far as practicable, labor should be permitted to select its own employment and not be shifted from one place to another and from one business to another.

That can be directed, by priority rulings, without the use of the draft or threat of the draft. These rulings would either stimulate or lessen production in many industries, businesses and professions, and labor of its own accord would find employment where the demand existed. I am unalterably opposed to a draft of labor that would take a man from one position under military compulsion and place him in another.

During the war the final pricrity was vested in the Chairman of the War Industries Board; but at his right hand always sat the military authority, whose necessities were met as far as possible. Priority was a final ruling that the industrial strategist made. It was governed by the military needs, although it was always taken into consideration that in the use of men, money and materials we had to keep up the morale of the civilian population, which is one of the greatest forces in war. A judicious and wise use of our resources made for the morale of the people and kept them whole-heartedly behind the fighting forces at the front. Indeed, I think the establishment of such an organization as I am outlining, ready to function, would do much to increase that morale.

As a matter of fait, the War Industries Board, as it was functioning at the end of the war, was doing, either directly or indirectly, nearly all the things above enumerated.

OPERATION OF BOARD

General Crowder, who was in charge of the draft, had asked the Chairman of the War Industries Board where he could obtain additional men needed for the army in France with the least possible dislocation of the war-making industrial civilian machinery, and we were in the process of replacting male labor with women. By a system of priorities, the board was allocating to our own army and navy, to the Allies and to the essential war industries the things that they required. It was giving priority ruling as to transportation, and they were being followed out by the Railroad Administrator.

The Railroad Director ran his train service, first, on our priority rulings and, secondarily, on an economic basis. The Fuel Administration distrbuted fuel only on the rulings of the War Industries Board. The board was endeavoring to disentangle and remove the many conflicts and competitive efforts involved in labor and buildings. It was allocating power and making regulations for the hitching up of scattered units of power. It was changing orders from congested to less congested districts.

It had actually carried into effect an order that no building involving $2,500 or more should be undertaken without the approval of the War Industries Board. No steel, no cement, no material of any kind could be used for any purpose whatsoever unless the War Industries Board permitted it. No steel company could sell more than five tons of steel unless the sale were approved by the Director of Steel.

PRESS COOPERATES

The Treasury would not permit the raising of money for any industrial or financial operation unless the War Industries Board approved the project. The President issued an order that no commandeering should be done by the army, navy, Shipping Board or Food Administration without the approval of the Chairman of the War Industries Board. Every raw material industry, and, indeed, practically every industry in the country was organized through appointment of committees, and none of these industries would do any business except under the rulings promulgated by the board.

These rulings were made known through the issuance of official bulletins at irregular intervals, and were widely distributed by the press which, I should like to say here, cooperated in this most necessary work with a wholehearted purpose that gave to the direction of the War Industries Board the instant and broad circulation they required.

HUSBANDING RESOURCES

We were endeavoring to arrange it so that the fighting force were to receive those things which they needed, and no more, so that whatever was not actually required at the front was left to civilian purposes. Industries were curtailed, but never destroyed; skeletonized, but never killed. Indeed, the use of men, money and materials was rapidly being brought into exactly that condition that I have previously called to your attention as necessary in case of another war.

A charming woman in Washington complained to me during the war that she could not get a zinc cover for her kitchen table because the Government would not let her have it. That was, and should have been, a detail of the supervision in time of war.

The War Industries Board, before the armistice, had reached an absolute agreement with all the makers and distributers of wholesale and retail shoes to fix prices, qualities and colors, to be effective July 1, 1919. Under this agreement a good, durable shoe could be bought for $3.50, while the highest grade, I think, was to be sold at $10.50. No one who did not have a card of the War Industries Board in his window could sell shoes. No jobber or manufacturer would sell shoes to anybody who did not have this card. The shoes were to be stamped Class A, B and C, and they had to be of the quality prescribed.

The country was so organized that there were committees in every district which would immediately report to Washington the name of any shoe retailer who did not carry out the regulations of the War Industries Board. Through restrictions on his labor, money, raw material and transportation, no manufacturer would have been permitted to sell to any dealer violating the regulations.

The country was so organized that there were committees in every district which would immediately report to Washington the names of any shoe retailer who did not carry out the regulations of the War Industries Board. Through restrictions on his labor, money, raw material and transportation, no manufacturer would have been permitted to sell to any dealer violating the regulations.

The manufacturers in this country of men's and women's wearing apparel had in 1918 been called to Washington, together with the retailers of various goods, and notified that certain regulations would have to be made in regard to retail prices and standardization of clothing because of the need of withdrawing from industry additional men and materials.

COMPETITION CONTROLLED

Some of the prices of materials bought from other countries were high because of the competitive bidding of the Allies and ourselves. The War Industries Board therefore urged and secured the appointment of a single executive to buy all the nirate needed and to parcel it out by priority among the Allies and ourselves.

Competition for wool, leather, platinum, maganese and other things that were produced outside of this country and the nations associated with us in the war was in process of elimination in the same way by the nations associated in the war against our common enemy. In each executive there sat a representative of every allied nation, who would state the things that his particular nation wanted. The executive would obtain the priority rulings. The plan was to allocate to each nation nitrate, wool, &c., according to its needs.

The work of the Conservation Division was of great importance in eliminating innumerable styles and in saving men, money and time. The Department of Commerce, I understand, is trying to put into effect many of these things in peace time.

And so there was built up this great machine which was enabling the military to put its mind on military operations and leave the industrial side of the war to those pepole who, by training and temperament, were able to handle the industrial side, just as the military people, by their training and temperament, were able to handle their side as specialists. No one can justly say that in these circumstances there will be any profit left in war or any profiteering in war; nor can any one say it cannot be done, for in 1918 it was being done.

A study of the picture that I have tried to give will demonstrate the following facts: Industry would be given the fullest self-control possible, except as to prices and to distribution, being left free to use its own initiative in carrying out the necessary war regulations. Capital would have the same burden, and would be left free within the limits of the needs of the war. Prices would be regulated on the basis of a fair return in the circumstances, with the same relationship as in the time preceding the war.

Men in the various industries and walks of life would bear the same proportionate burdens. Labor, and I mean labor and services in the broader sense, would be regulated by keeping the returns from its efforts in the same proportion as existed during peace time, because not only labor would be regulated, but also all the things necessary for one to eat and wear would be regulated in the same proportion. There would be Government direction and not Government control.

As the Government has directed the use of its man power, it would direct the use of its econmic power. There would be no possibility of wartime profiteering. Economic chaos after the war would be prevented, or much lessened.

The thought naturally arises why, if regulation of prices and distribution of production can be done in war time, they cannot be done in peace time. The answer is that this cannot be done. In war there is the urge of common danger and common sacrifice, and a spirit of service which, in my opinion, cannot be brought about in peace time.

We have not yet found during time of peace anybody wise enough to say what individuals shall do, nor have we found a substitute for personal initiative. Even during the war, when regulations were put into effect, the endeavor was always made to leave as untrammeled as possible personal initiative and the opportunity to gain from it, so far as it did not affect the general interest.

SAVE YOUR CHILD FROM SUFFERING.

There is nothing more trying to a mother than to see her little one in pain, whilst she stands helplessly by not knowing what to do to relieve its suffering. Mothers who keep Baby's Own Tablets in the house ready for such emergencies feel safe and confident, knowing that this famous Canadian children's remedy gives prompt relief in the majority of infantile ailments.

Baby's Own Tablets are mother's help and the children's friend. They speedily reduce fever, dispel constipation, relieve indigestion, colic and croup, sweeten the stomach, allay teething pains, quiet the nerves, and promote health-giving sleep and a good appetite. They are guaranteed absolutely free from opiates, narcotics, or other harmful drugs, and may be given freely without fear of harm to the youngest and most delicate child.

How Civilizations Die

By Dean Inge, In The London Spectator

The notion that civilisations grow old and die like individuals is untenable. There is no valid analogy between the life of an organism and that of a society. Some of the lowest forms of life, like the germ cells of animals, are potentially immortal; but nature's plan for perpetuating a species is by births and deaths. There is no tendency for a species, or an organised society, to wear out like the body of an old man.

Nevertheless, history records the decay and disappearance of several civilisations. Some have been murdered outright. Such were the civilisation of the Arabian Nights at Baghdad, where the Mongols left a pile of 800,000 corpses, and the indigenous cultures of Mexico and Peru, where the population was not exterminated, but violently expropriated and crushed under an alien yoke. Such crimes may be heard of again, if a nation can find room for its expanding numbers only by the massacre or deportation of a weaker race.

More interesting to the biologist and sociologist are instances of national decay which resemble death by disease. The salient example in European history is the practical disappearance of the ancient Greeks and Romans, the guardians of the culture which, after a long agony, may be said to have died in the sixth century of our era. Unfortunately, the causes of this catastrophe have never been fully elucidated, though the symptoms have been enumerated by many historians. In Greece, the population which a mountainous country and a poor soil could support was rigorously limited, and the fields for emigration were cut off, after a time, by alien powers. There is reason to think that the soil of the Mediterranean lands became steadily less productive, partly from unscientific tillage, and partly from the destruction of the woods for smelting minerals. The decay of the Romans is perhaps to be attributed to different causes, and above all, to the economic parasitism which is the Nemesis of conquest and plunder. In any case, it is worth noticing that the disappearance of the old culture, with its traditions and religion, was the result of the disappearance of its guardians. The Olympians died with their worshippers; the barbarians whom Hellas had despised had no zeal for perpetuating Hellenism.

Civilisation has always had its critics and its enemies. Primitive instincts rise in revolt against conventions. The town-dweller, if he can afford it, plays at being a savage hunter for two months of the year, or satisfies the nomad instinct by aimless travelling; after which he returns to his desk with "emotions purged," as Aristotle says. The poorer townsman suffers from a chronic malaise which he does not understand; it is possible that this is one cause of strikes. The young intellectual becomes a political agitator, or writes books on "Civilisation: its Cause and Cure." And now the anthropologist comes forward with a severe indictment of all human achievement during the last ten thousand years. From the time when man began to make tools and improve his environment, his intrinsic progress has ceased. His brain has ceased to grow; his natural weapons have atrophied; he has becomes a parasite of his own machines, and would starve if he were deprived of them. Natural selection has been displaced by an active counter-selection, an "elimination of the best," which proceeds unnoticed in peace, and is from time to time accelerated by war.

Tools may keep a civilisation alive through a long process of racial decay; but such a culture is likely to be both sordid and unhappy, and each generation will find the accumulating burden of artificialities more difficult to carry. The higher spiritual gains of civilisation are likely to be the first to go, and an early symptom will be a reversion to superstition, sacerdotalism, and the lower forms of religion generally.

Popular education and the fusion of classes may disguise the advance of racial decadence by enabling a society to utilise hitherto untapped reservoirs of natural ability. But as each able and energetic family rises to the top, it tends to be sterilised, and the supply must soon fail. Two centuries of dysgenic selection are enough to destroy the inherited advantages of the most gifted race.

Another danger which threatens modern civilisation arises from recent political and social changes. A great nation can support without difficulty a comparatively small parasitic class at each end of the social ladder. When the privileged class becomes too extravagant and incompetent, as happened in France at the end of the eighteenth century, it may be swept away by a revolution. But it is a much more serious matter when the whole mass of the nation aspires to live beyond its income. In this country we have had for two generations a number of angry rhetoricans who repeat incessantly the parrot cry that our social and economic institutions are rotten, that the working-class is exploited, and that almost any change must be for the better. In fact, the average income of a family before the Great War was about £145. If the whole of the national income could be pooled, the dividend per family would have been much less than this, since part of the incomes of the rich appears a second time in the earnings of the professional men and others who live upon them. Inflation has, of course, increased the nominal wealth of the nation, as well as the average payment of labor; but we must add to the wages of the workman the vast amount which his class receives under the heads of free education, doles, pensions, and in exemption from the burdens of taxation. It is almost demonstrable that labor is now fully paid, especially when we take into account its diminished output.

COTTON PIECE GOODS CHIEF IMPORT INTO DUTCH INDIES

Market Is Third In The World For Cotton Textiles

JAPAN SELLING

Handbook Gives Interesting Facts About Trade

Cotton piece goods constitute the principal group of imported articles into the Dutch East Indies, which ranks third among the world markets for cotton textiles, being exceeded only by British-India and China. Japan has recently taken first place ahead of Great Britain as the chief supplier of raw unbleached drills and shirtings to the D.E.I., according to the 1924 edition of the Handbook of the Netherlands East Indies which has been received by the China Press through the courtesy of the Consul-General for the Netherlands in Shanghai.

The Handbook is a beautifully illustrated volume of 350 pages, issued in Batavia, Java, by the Division of Commerce of the Department of Agriculture, Industry and Commerce. It gives the history and geography, and a review of the finances, education, agriculture, industry and commerce of the great island empire which stretches for the distance of 3,000 nautical miles across the South Pacific.

In reviewing the spectacular commercial contest for supremacy in the cotton textile field, the Handbook says: "As there is no textile manufacture of importance in the D.E.I. all requirements must be covered by imports, which, consequently represent the needs of this country. The enormous demand is clearly proved by the import figures, which in 1913 amounted to more than 110 million guilders and during the last three years amounted to respectively 266.2, 255.1 and 182.5 million guilders (1 guilder is equal to G.$0.40).

"The chief suppliers are Holland, Great Britain and Japan, which, during the last few years, have been waging an exciting war for the lead. Whereas Great Britain was the chief supplier until a short while ago, Japan has succeeded in ousting her from first place, as far as the raw unbleached drills and shirtings are concerned, while Holland is the largest supplier of bleached woven cottons."

Second in importance after piece goods are iron and steel and machinery. The imports during the years 1920-22 amounted to 195.2, 205.3 and 77.2 million guilders. This group includes an exceedingly large variety of articles; the chief ones, as far as the metals, go, are galvanised roofing and ceiling iron, iron and steel in sheets and plates, nails, ordinary and patent axels and tinplates. The chief countries of origin are the United States, Germany and Great Britain. A large variety of machinery is required of which Holland, the United States and Great Britain are the largest suppliers in the numerical order given.

Rice is the next most important import article. The Dutch East Indies do not produce a sufficient amount to supply their own needs, which makes it necessary to import large quantities each year. The chief suppliers are Rangoon, Saigon and Bangkok. The imports in 1923 amounted to (in 1,000 K.G.; 1 K.G. is equal to 2.2 lbs.): Siam, 115,171; Saigon, 37,994; British India, 156,408; other countries, 7,649.

Butter and flour, two important articles of food for the European population, are obtained for the greater part from Australia, which has ousted Holland, being in former years the chief supplier of butter.

Sugar is chief among the exports of the D.E.I. The exports of this commodity for the last four years (in 1,000 K.G.) amounted to: 1920, 1,513,780; 1921, 1,677,080; 1922, 1,435,776; 1923, 1,824,650.

Java sugar goes to a great number of destinations. The principal markets, however, are China (Hongkong), British India, Japan and Europe. No refined sugar is manufactured in Java, but the manufacture of the white millsugar has reached such a grade of perfection, that the best qualities as regards purity and whiteness are almost equal to the refined product.

Next to sugar, tobacco is the most important export product. The tobacco of Sumatra is particularly well known in the markets of the world. The estates there produce only valuable wrapper.

The Dutch East Indies are one of the three big world producers of tin. Rich tin strata are found on the two islands of Banka and Billington, and tin ore also is found on a few other islands. The tin industry in Banka was organised by the Government. Banka tin has a world-wide reputation for its purity, with a percentage of 99.9 tin.

Other highly important exports are rubber, the production of which is a considerable percentage of the total world production; gutta percha, used principally in the manufacture of submarine cables, golf balls, etc.; cocoanut oil, essential oils, petroleum, coffee, tea, pepper, tapioca and quinine.

Our London Business Letter

Poincare Defeat Causes Weakness In Foreign Exchanges; But Stock Market Scarcely Affected; Growing Confidence In Brazil; Month's Exports Again Higher

(From Our Own Correspondent)

London, May 17.—Political events at home and on the Continent have moved rapidly during the past week. The French elections took place last Sunday and the outcome is that M. Poincare has been beaten and has handed in his resignation to date from June 1 next. It is generally admitted that the results, culminating, as they have, in the Poincare resignation, have caused but little surprise. Attention has been drawn repeatedly to the ill-effects of this Minister's policy and it is now fairly safe to assume that a very considerable modification of his policy will follow.

With his defeat, difficulties in the way of general agreement over the reports of the Expert Committees have, to an extent, been removed. There is no doubt whatever that the pursuance of the Poincare policy, together with the fruitless invasion of the Ruhr, has for a very long time been the main obstacle in the path of economic recovery in Europe. Therefore the change should make all the difference. Of course, the immediate effect has been to cause excitement and weakness in the foreign exchanges, especially with regard to the leading Continental currencies. French francs, for example, are down to 77½ to the £ while Belgian francs are over 91 to the £. On the Stock Exchange the news is looked upon as a further addition to European complications and heaviness in prices is the direct outcome. Business all-round is small and no increase seems likely.

NEW FOREIGN LOANS

Taking advantage of the prevailing ease in monetary conditions, many new loans are about to be issued, and from all accounts the underwriters are having a busy time. Of these new loans, the greater part will be made by foreign Powers. Czecho-Slovakia is on the point of issuing the balance of £10,000,000 raised in 1922, amounting to £4,000,000, and if as is generally thought, a small portion is reserved for Amsterdam and the balance divided between London and New York, the amount to be offered here should total about £2,000,000. The last issue which took the form of 8 percent stands at 97¾. Apart from the £10,000,000 loan for Hungary, negotiations are proceeding for loans for Peru, Greece, Spain and Brazil. All these loans are naturally going to take a lot of money off the market but there seems no reason to anticipate any great change in money rates in the near future despite the fact that the New York Reserve Bank's rate has recently been lowered.

LESS BUSINESS

With the disbursement of War Loan and other dividends next month, gilt-edged securities should receive a fresh fillip. For the time being, the investment demand, so pronounced over the past couple of months, has eased off, but still there is a steady inquiry for corporation stocks, colonial issues and the like. Investment stocks have a healthy appearance though, perhaps, prominent issues like War Loan and Conversion are easier for want of support. For a short-dated investment Five percent War Loan is one of the cheapest obtainable. The new 4½ percent Conversion Loan is being dealt in at about 97⅞.

BRAZILIAN PROSPECTS

One of the best features in the foreign bond market is the general improvement in Brazilian securities. In view of latest developments, there is no doubt that the outlook for Brazils appears brighter than for some years past. On this account quotations should steadily improve during the next few months. Of the factors responsible for this opinion, perhaps the most important is the encouraging position of the coffee trade. This has naturally brought about improvement in the country's credit, which is being reflected in an appreciating value of the Milreis, which now stands at 6 9/32d. The President's recent proposals regarding expenditure in his message at the opening of Congress inspires confidence, a confidence which many previous Administrations have not been privileged to share.

GOOD FRENCH RAILS

The labor position has an important bearing on prices of home railway stocks, and on that account the threat of a strike at all the coal-ports is to be regretted. The latest news, however, is more reassuring, for it is announced that no settlement of the dispute having been arrived at, the Minister of Labor has decided, in view of the serious effect of a stoppage of work in the coal exporting ports of Great Britain, to set up a Court of Inquiry under Part 2 of the Industrial Courts Act to inquire into the causes and circumstances of the threatened stoppage. At the request of the Minister of Labor, the representatives of the unions concerned agreed to postpone the operation of the strike notices. Owing to the trade situation, goods traffic is not up to expectations but passenger traffic should show a steady increase during the next few months when the attractions of Wembley become generally recognised. Extra traffic should not be confined to the London lines, for all the big systems are providing special facilities.

Foreign rails, though quiet, are mostly firmer. Following in the wake of the Government Bonds, Brazilian Rails have been good, Leopoldinas being particularly prominent on further good traffics. United of Havanas are affected by political considerations. The favorable position of the nitrate industry has rather drawn attention to Antofagastas, which are being well supported on hopeful dividend anticipations. French Railway Sterling Bonds show marked appreciation.

BUDGET EFFECT

Although, so far, the response has been merely moderate, some such stimulus as the abolition of the Corporation Profits Tax was badly needed by the industrial markets. As might be expected, the proposed removal of the McKenna Duties has been received with a storm of protest by the motor-car industry, though in cases like Rolls-Royce, B.S.A. Napiers, etc., the importance of the measure may easily be exaggerated. Dunlops have been affected but this is doubtless due to the uncertainty pending the report which it is expected will be published in about a week's time. It is rumored that, under the reconstruction scheme, the shares will be cut down to 6s. 8d. Textiles have been fairly firm with support forthcoming for Fine Spinners on the increase in dividend to 14 percent. Catering and allied shares, now referred to as "Exhibition" stocks, should be worth watching.

Regarding the nitrate industry, it is noteworthy that at the extraordinary general meeting of the Producers' Association held in Valparaiso on May 8, the Association was renewed by about 98½ percent of its former members for a period of six years from July 1, 1924, with the right to individual producers to sell their own production, if so desired, after three years. Negotiations are still continuing with the remaining 1½ percent represented by four small Chilean producers, whose eventual adhesion is considered certain. The new issue movement alluded to earlier is by no means confined to foreign loans, for many new industrial issues are promised. The most interesting of these will probably be the Beecham's Pills and Covent Garden Estates offer of 900,000 8 percent cumulative £1 preference shares at par.

NO SUPPORT FOR RUBBER

The price of rubber has suffered another fall to no better than 10-8d per lb. for crepe and sheet, and not since November, 1922, has such a low level been recorded. The market is in a weak state and a good deal of liquidation is proceeding. In fact, a dull and uninteresting period has been entered upon, which may continue until America ceases to abstain from buying in this market.

OIL PROSPECTS

In view of the latest cut in the price of crude oil, the quotation now being 4.25 dollars per barrel against 4.50 dollars per barrel and the unsettlement caused on the Paris Bourse by the resignation of M. Poincare, it is quite natural that the tone of the oil share market should be heavy. On the whole, oil shares are quiet with here and there a "star" turn to enliven the proceedings. The recent rise in Lobitos has been well maintained. According to current market gossip, the latest dividend estimate is 60 percent, tax free, while the idea of a share for share bonus still obtains. There has beeen a spectacular rise in British controlled issues on rumors of buying for control. There is very good reason to believe that this company's position has improved considerably over the past six months and the prospects appear bright. The latest information is that the pipe lines which runs from Buchivacoa should be finished before the end of this year. When completed, it is estimated that the company will be producing an extra 7,000 tons a week.

SOUTH AFRICAN HOPES

South African gold mining shares are being affected by a variety of factors, although the gold mining industry, which, of course, is the basis of the country's prosperity, is scarcely likely to be affected by any political party—even the Nationalist-Labor Group. However, until the results of the elections are known, a certain amount of uneasiness is bound to ensue. Consequent upon the recent rise in the dollar exchange, the reduction in the price of gold left its mark upon the April profits figures of the Rand Mining Companies. On the other hand, it is quite on the cards that a change of Government in France may prove helpful towards a settlement of the Reparations question. In fact, De Beers already reflect this sentiment. It is understood that a satisfactory dividend on De Beers is now almost assured. The last distribution, it will be recalled, was 10s. per share for the second half of 1920.

THE SILVER MARKET

There is little business passing in the silver market. Messrs. Samuel Montagu and Company, in their weekly circular, state that after the steady advance of silver prices during the last week or so there has been a healthy reaction. This is but natural considering that, on the whole, there is really an absence of competition. Only the recurrence at intervals of bear covering contends at the present time with the inquiry for the Continent, as China and India do not figure as buyers. Moderate selling takes place occasionally from China. It has not been difficult, at the higher level of prices, to obtain silver from America, but even if the market continues mainly of a "one horse" character, the undertone is likely to keep good, and, should competition from India or China set in, rising rates can be expected. A feature of the week has been considerable Continental sales, which, however, found a ready market.

Notice To Subscribers

In an endeavor to produce an even better paper than was formerly the case—an endeavor which the steadily growing popularity of The China Press has proved to be successful—the publishers have recently increased the editorial staff, supplemented the cable and foreign correspondence services, added a pictorial news section, and improved the editorial and feature contents. These improvements naturally entail a much heavier cost of production, and thus we are reluctantly compelled to increase our rates of subscription, as from April 1st, as follows:

One Year	Mex.	$28.00
Six Months	"	15.00
Four Months	"	10.50
One Month	"	2.75

Postage to outports, etc. $6.00 per annum extra.

Under the new rates subscribers will still obtain The China Press more cheaply than it can be purchased day by day on the street. Allowing 312 publishing days to the year (230 weekdays and 52 Sundays), the annual cost, if purchased on the street, is $36.40.

CABINET IN TOKIO CALLS HALT ON ISSUE OF BONDS

Decides Against Any New Flotation In Present Financial Year

Tokio, June 18.—A remarkable decision was reached by the Cabinet yesterday in its full session. Its effect on the country's finance and commerce will not be visible at once, but when it is visible it will be striking. The Cabinet decided not to float any new issue of bonds in the market during the present financial year.

Immediately after the organization of the present Cabinet it was announced as the new administration's policy to restrict the new official issue of bonds as far as possible. The investment market which had been troubled with too frequent issues of State bonds was pleased with that statement. The investment market's reaction to that statement has been since visible in the ruling tone of the bond market in Tokio.

As reported from reliable quarters, however, it has been stated in the money market that the Government will not be able to refrain entirely from calling up capital in the market. At least Yen 80,000,000 of new bonds will be sold in the market during the present financial year.

NO FLOTATION WHATEVER

At yesterday's session the Cabinet went farther than that, according to reports from authoritative sources. It was decided officially that during the 1924-1925 financial year any issue, however small, would not be floated in the market.

Whatever capital the Government will want will be raised by drawing upon the Treasury's Deposit Section. The first possible effect of this decision, if carried out actually, will be the release of capital beyond Yen 150,000,000 during the year. The second effect is so much deflation of credit. From the standpoint of the investment market, it will be a relief possibly preventing further stringency of loan terms.

In Japan for the last decade an inflationist policy of finance under the leadership of the Seiyukai has been adopted. Almost all heavy issues have been sold and much of the nation's annual savings has been absorbed for State enterprises. Its evil effects on the business world have been too visible to be analysed. The Treasury has also been badly hit by that policy of financing enterprises with loan proceeds, for its annual payment of interest has threatened to exceed Yen 300,000,000.

MADE LARGE LOANS

At the end of 1914 or at the commencement of the world war Japan's national loans amounted to Yen 2,055,000,000 in round numbers. At the end of 1918 the total shot up to Yen 3,051,776,403. In the following table the balances at the end of fiscal years since that are given:—

Years	Yen
1918-1919 ...	3,151,776,403
1919-1920 ...	3,277,873,477
1920-1921 ...	3,820,760,334
1921-1922 ...	4,097,315,292
1922-1923 ...	4,357,488,555
1923-1924 ...	4,428,000,000

The newest census including 6 per cent. and 6½ per cent. bonds is not available, but when those and the latest domestic issues are included the aggregate is almost up to Yen 5,000,000,000. This means that Japan's national obligations have been roughly doubled within the last decade or so.

Our London Business Letter

for April were the further expansion in British exports and the big drop in the value of imports compared with the previous month. The total value of British exports in April was £62,866,926, an increase of £1,764,159 while imports at £36,165,549 show a decline of no less than £17,563,084. When compared with April of last year, both figures are almost stationary, there being a decrease in imports of £282,463 and a decline in exports of £4,176. The figures for the four months show an increase in imports of £27,735,595, while exports are £7,939,078 up and exports £9,877,997 higher. Coal output for week ended May 3 amounted to 5,684,700 tons, for the previous week 4,049,400 tons and for the corresponding week of 1923 to 5,327,000 tons.

IRON & STEEL QUIET

Quiet conditions still rule in the iron and steel markets and business at the weekly meeting of the London Iron and Steel Exchange was inactive. The hesitating tone which has been a feature of the market for the past week or two has been accentuated by pessimistic reports regarding the ill-advised speculation in francs during March and a subsequent appreciation of the franc exchange. The British steel market has been unsettled by the failure of several Continental firms which has contracted to supply considerable quantities of iron and steel material to British buyers. The latter have been notified in a number of cases that these contracts cannot be fulfilled, and as a result there has been an increase enquiry on the British market.

The situation has been further disturbed by fresh reductions in the prices asked by Continental manufacturers and by the weaker tendency of the franc exchange. Continental quotations, however, have not yet reached a level which buyers find attractive, especially as for the time being only a limited business is offering. The British manufacturers continue to take a large share of the orders that come forward but they still claim that the general run of iron and steel prices are unremunerative. The export trade is particularly quiet and it appears that most of the important overseas buyers have covered their immediate requirements. The business passing is principally in small parcels, but in the aggregate it amounts to a substantial tonnage, although it is only sufficient to employ a proportion of the productive capacity of the country.

Exchange Market

Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand state in their exchange circular for the week ending June 25:—

The price of silver in London has declined ⅛d. for ready and ¼d. forward during the week, the last quotation received being 34⅞d. ready and forward. Locally the market has followed the course of silver, official T.T. rate on London having declined from 3s. 3½d. to 3s. 3d. Business in regard to imports and exports is still on a very small scale, but speculators have been fairly active, and owing to a good demand for yen and sterling our market has been on the easy side for the greater part of the week. We close steady with T.T. on London offering at 3s. 3⅛d., New York 70¾d.

Our stocks of silver are reported as follows:

Sycee and bar silver Tls. 41,306,000, an increase of Tls. 2,345,000.
Chinese and Mexican dollars $48,050,000, an increase of $1,540,000.
Silver yen, Yen. 800,000.
Estimated value Tls. 75,981,000 as against Tls. 48,357,000 held at this time last year.

Silk Shipments

The silk which was shipped by the P. & O. s.s. Kashmir from Shanghai on May 20 arrived in Marseilles at 6 a.m. on June 24.

Freight Market

Messrs. Wheelock and Co. state in their current freight market report:—The hopes of some improvement setting in the freight markets to Europe and America with the advent of the tea season have been sadly disappointing and tea has hardly begun to move as yet in comparison with previous years, whilst the less said about general cargo for export, the better.

Coastwise:—There is again no improvement to report, and, if anything, the market is even weaker than when last writing. Southern business is non-existent and the northern markets are consequently suffering from a surplus of tonnage, which has had the effect of lowering rates.

Coal Market

Messrs. Wheelock & Co. state in their coal market report:—

Japan Coal:—This market has continued very quiet during the past fortnight and no fresh business worth speaking about has been dine. There is a certain amount of inferior grades of coals coming into the port which is being offered at cheap prices but we have not heard of much business being done in it; arrivals and deliveries of contract cargo are proceeding normally.

Fushun Coal:—No change.

Fuchung Anthracite:—Demand steady, stocks light, prices firm.

Kaiping Coal:—Deliveries under existing contracts have been heavy and stocks both here and at Chinwangtao are somewhat below the average. Considerable movements are likely to continue for some time tiwards inland districts served by the waterway.

Some Information About The American Political System

A GREAT deal has been heard in recent days and weeks regarding the great political conventions which are being held in the United States this month. The Republicans met on June 10, and after a few days of serious deliberation and some display of oratory, nominated candidates for the Presidency and Vice-Presidency and adopted a platform or program with which they will go before the American people for approval or disapproval at the national election which will be held next November. The Democratic Party is now holding its national convention in New York City and in a short time we should know the names of the candidates and the chief features of the Democratic platform.

Most persons, even many Americans, accept these great political meetings as a matter of course without consideration of the processes of development which have brought them into being. These great American political meetings, attended by thousands of delegates from all parts of the United States, Alaska, Hawaii, the Philippines, Porto Rico and the Panama Canal Zone, had their beginnings in the town mass meeting or caucus. When the American colonies first obtained their freedom from Great Britain, the populations were small and were located on the Atlantic seaboard. Public questions were settled in town meetings almost exactly the same as the Shanghai ratepayers gather in the Town Hall for the purpose of deciding matters affecting the Settlement. The old English system of a property qualification for voters which still applies in Shanghai originally applied in the early American colonies. After the American revolution, the property restriction upon voting was gradually broken down. The fifteenth amendment to the Constitution proposed by Congress on February 26, 1869, and put into effect on March 30, 1870, affirms that, "The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any State on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude." This amendment enfranchised the African slaves following the Civil War. In quite recent years another amendment reading, "The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex" made all women eligible to vote. Thus it is estimated that in the election this fall at least 30,000,000 people in the United States will register their views on national questions. The present population of the United States is considerably in excess of 110,000,000.

The delegates to the national political conventions are selected either in State conventions or caucuses or by means of the direct primary. In most cases they go to the conventions "instructed" or, in other words, pledged to vote for certain candidates. After the balloting has been in progress for some time and the candidates to whom they are pledged are unsuccessful, they are supposed to be released for other candidates. Thus the news dispatches a few days ago credited Mr. McAdoo, the leading Democratic candidate, with a statement that he intended to "throw" his delegates to Senator Glass of Virginia in case he was unable to obtain the nomination. The Republican National Convention was attended by 1,109 delegates and in order to win the nomination it was necessary for President Coolidge and his running mate, General Dawes, to obtain a bare majority. The Democratic Convention which has 1,098 delegates, however, has a rule that a successful candidate must be able to obtain a two-thirds majority of the delegates in order to obtain the nomination.

In the national election the voters do not vote directly for President or Vice-President. They vote instead for Presidential Electors, each State being entitled to as many of these Electors as it is entitled to have Senators and Representatives in the national Congress. These Electors constitute a body known as the Electoral College and the voters in each State may vote for as many Electors as the State is entitled to have in the Electoral College. The Electors, to the number to which a State is entitled, receiving the largest number of popular votes represent the State in the Electoral College. Early in January, following the national election in November, the Presidential Electors chosen by popular vote meet in their respective States and vote by ballot for President and Vice-President. Three certified copies of their votes are then made, one copy being sent by special messenger to the President of the Senate of the United States, another copy is sent by registered mail to the same official and a third copy is filed with the federal district judge in whose district the Electors meet.

Early in the February following, the President of the Senate, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, opens all of these certificates and the votes are counted. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be President, if such number constitutes a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed, and the person having the greatest number of votes as Vice-President is declared elected Vice-President under the same conditions.

If it should happen, as may be possible this year in case a Third Party enters the field, that no candidate has received a majority, then the members of the Senate retire and the House of Representatives immediately proceeds to ballot for a President from among the three candidates who received the greatest number of electoral votes. In the voting, each State has but one vote. If the House of Representatives should be unable to elect—which is also a possibility in view of the almost even division of the present House—the Senate then proceeds to vote for a Vice-President from the two candidates who received the highest number of Electoral votes. In this vote each Senator has one vote and the candidate for Vice-President having the largest vote is declared President of the United States. In the entire history of the United States, only two Presidents have been chosen by the House of Representatives—Thomas Jefferson and John Quincy Adams.

According to Mr. Louis Seibold, of the New York Herald-Tribune, one of the keenest political observers in the United States, the line-up in respect to the Republicans and Democrats this year is approximately as follows! The "normally Republican" States will have 299 electoral votes from Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming. In this list Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, Washington, and Wisconsin are likely to go radical on a Third Party ticket or Democratic.

The "normally Democratic" States will have 136 electoral votes in the so-called Solid South, or otherwise, Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia. Then, in addition to these, there are the "doubtful" States having 96 electoral votes as follows; Arizona, California, Colorado, Delaware, Idaho, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada and New Mexico.

To win this year, the Democrats must get their customary 136 votes from the South, the 96 votes of the "doubtful States" and, in addition, 34 votes from the normally Republican group of States.

Britain And The Sudan

IT might appear at first blush that there is remote connection between China and the question of Great Britain and the Sudan, yet on closer examination it suggests the reflection that it has a good object-lesson for the warring factions of China. The British Government has just declared that it is not going to abandon the Sudan in any sense whatever. This definite endorsement of the policy of previous Governments was proclaimed by Lord Parmoor in the House of Lords on Wednesday in reply to a question. Such a decision on the part of the first Labor Government in Great Britain shows that no matter how diametrically opposed may be the views of the Labor, Conservative and Liberal Parties in Great Britain on some issues, they are always ready and willing to meet on common ground in the larger interests of the Empire, which is more than can be said of the warring factions in China, who put pelf and power above the welfare of the Republic which they profess to love.

To return to the question of Egypt and the Sudan, the business capacity of the Egyptian Parliament has not yet been put to the test. So far, its relationship to the Government has chiefly expressed itself in an insistent concern that there should be no weakening of the demand for the withdrawal of the Army of Occupation and the complete cession of the Sudan to Egypt. The question assumes greater importance in view of the impending visit of the Egyptian Premier, Zaghlul Pasha, to London to discuss outstanding questions with Great Britain and the Egyptian demand for the cession of the Sudan. In view of the importance of the issue involved, a few historical details may not be out of place here.

The rule of Egypt in the Sudan, after having gradually extended during the course of sixty years, was interrupted in 1882 by the revolt of the Mahdi, who, with his successor, the Khalifa, held the country for about sixteen years under a desolating tyranny. In 1896 the Anglo-Egyptian Army commenced operations for the recovery of the lost provinces, and on September 2, 1898, the overthrow of the Khalifa was completed. In November, 1899, he was overtaken by the Egyptian forces near Gedid, where he was slain in battle, and his remaining followers taken prisoners.

A convention between the British and Egyptian Governments, signed at Cairo, January 19, 1899, provides for the administration of the territory south of the 22nd parallel of latitude by a Governor-General, appointed by Egypt with the assent of Great Britain, and declares the general principles in accordance with which the administration shall be carried on. The British and Egyptian flags shall be used together; laws shall be made by proclamation; no duties shall be levied on imports from Egypt, and duties on imports from other countries, via the Red Sea, shall not exceed those levied in Egypt; the import and export of slaves is prohibited, and special attention shall be paid to the Brussels Act of 1890 respecting the import and export of arms, ammunition and spirits.

The Sudan has been divided into fifteen provinces. The Governors of provinces are British officers of the Egyptian Army employed under the Sudan Government or British civil officials of the Government. Administration is carried out through British Inspectors in charge of one or more districts into which the provinces are subdivided, these units being supervised by District officials who are still, in most cases, Egyptian officers lent from the Egyptian Army, although an increasing number of natives of the country are being employed in administrative posts.

In 1910 a Governor-General's Council was created to assist the Governor-General in the discharge of his executive and legislative powers. All ordinances, laws and regulations are now made by the Governor-General in Council.

The Enclave of Lado, which was continued in the occupation of H. M. King Leopold II, King of the Belgians, during his reign, by the Agreement signed at Brussels on May 12, 1906, reverted to the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan on his death, and has been included in the Mongalla province.

So much for the past history of the region which is soon to form the subject-matter of important discussions in London. To the new Egyptian Chamber of Deputies has been left the privilege of making interesting history for the delectation of the present generation. This House has now been in session for some three months. It has been occupied mainly in discussing its Rules of Procedure, a draft having previously been prepared for submission to it. As Egypt has, for practical purposes, no real parliamentary traditions, these rules have been prepared, like the Constitution, by an eclectic study of existing European models. From Britain they have borrowed, among other things, the King's Speech, questions to Ministers, Parliamentary Under-Secretaries, and, to a certain extent, the Clyde method of treating the Speaker of the House.

When a child is born, the professional attendants are never satisfied with its condition until it has cried with a lusty voice. On this principle, those who are responsible for this Parliamentary child must indeed be content, as a London correspondent facetiously remarks. The Senate, or Upper House, has been quietly business-like, but so far, the sittings of the Lower Chamber have been mainly characterised by clamor—a fact that is reminiscent of the Peking Parliament in the stormy days of Yuan Shih-kai. This arises, we are told, not from uncontrolled angry passions, but from the keenness of competition to speak. Egyptians are naturally fluent and iterative advocates, but their capacity to listen quietly and to weigh what others say in set discussion is not, outside the higher administrative ranks, in proportion. In addition, as four-fifths of the members belong to the same party, the necessity for party discipline and the appointment of Whips has not yet arisen, so that the Speaker has no one with whom he can come to a tacit understanding as to the order in which members will address the House. Catching the Speaker's eye, in these circumstances, becomes almost an athletic pursuit, and it is his ear much more than his eye that is appealed to.

The venerable Speaker, Mazlum Pasha, must sigh for the days of somnolent quiet when he presided over the old Legislative Assembly. In this new Parliament, when at first he failed to obtain order by appeal, he began by temporarily leaving the Chair. Then he had recourse to a handbell. "There is no necessity to ring that bell," said a recalcitrant member. "It's my bell," said the Speaker, "and I'll do what I like with it;" and a few days later he had installed his now famous fire-gong.

Such are the amenities of parliamentary life in Egypt today. If, in the coming negotiations with Great Britain, an accommodation is reached in which the legitimate interests of England are provided for, the young Parliament, when the agreement is laid before it, will then have an opportunity of proving both its wisdom and its moral courage. It will need them both.

EXCERPTS FROM GREAT WRITERS

By Mathy

SLOVENLY THOUGHT

Clean up your thought. Don't have your mind looking like the dining-table after a banquet, or the floor after a political meeting. Sweep it and dust it, and put the ideas away where they belong.

Don't have a waste-basket mind.

Or a top-bureau-drawer mind.

It doesn't do you much good to have a grand idea, or a wonderful impression, or a strong passion, if you don't know where to put it.

I notice when I talk to you that you have a good many interesting notions. The trouble is they are all higgledy-piggledy; they have no unity, coherence, order, organisation.

You think, but you don't think anything out. Your wheat is full of chaff.

Perhaps I can help you if you will lend me your ear for a space.

1. Don't pick up some opinion you hear, and make it your own because it sounds fine, and go to passing it out, without carefully examining it, scrutinizing, cross-questioning and testing it.

2. One of the best tests of any (not an infallible, but a very valuable, test) is, "Will it work?" If it won't, something's wrong with it, nine times out of ten. That last brilliant notion of yours—hundreds of sensible people have had it, and discarded it, because it wouldn't work.

3. Don't let anybody make you think you owe a certain amount of belief in a thing simply because you can't disprove it. Nor be deceived by the argument, "If that doesn't account for it, what does?" You don't have to account for it at all. Some of the most pestiferous bunk has got itself established by this kind of reasoning. You don't have to believe or disbelieve everything that comes along; most things you just hang up and wait.

4. Don't be afraid to say, "I don't know." It's a sign that you know what you do know.

5. Ask questions. Don't be ashamed of appearing ignorant. What you ought to be ashamed of is seeming to understand when you don't.

6. Classify. Education is nothing but the art of classification. Keep a scrap-book. Keep an index rerum. And classify.

7. Waste no time in acquiring "general information." Always read and study with a purpose. Look up subjects; don't just read books. Books are to be referred to, consulted, not to be read through— that is, as a rule.

8. Be a friend and daily companion to the dictionary and encyclopedia. Look things up.

9. Define. Practise defining. Practise telling what a thing is not, as well as what it is.

10. Get a clear idea of what you don't know. Then you can see better what you do know.

11. Write. Not for publication, necessarily, but for yourself. Writing accustoms you to choose just the right words. Beware of adjectives, especially two of them. Favor nouns. Use simple, short words. They mean more, and carry farther.

12. And never hurry or worry.

Books And So Forth

By Frederic F. Van de Water (F. F. V.)

E. Phillips Oppenheim, having squeezed the present pretty completely dry of international crises, intrigue, secret agents and adventuresses, has moved ahead thirty years and is writing now of future international crises, intrigue, secret agents, spies and adventuresses. With all of the world-to-be ahead of him, there is no reason why he shouldn't go on writing indefinitely.

Personally, we hope he does. If "The Wrath to Come" (Little, Brown) is any criterion, setting the clock ahead three decades improves Mr. Oppenheim's tale-telling ability, if that is possible. His most recent book is as good a yarn as he has ever written.

Humanity, we are reminded by "The Wrath to Come," doesn't change much in thirty years. Mr. Oppenheim's scene has altered, but despite the generation and a half's work of evolution, his people are still pretty much the same—sleek, correctly habited people, immensely punctillious in their social contacts while scheming desperately to thwart one another in a particularly nefarious plot.

Mr. Oppenheim's Monte Carlo of the present is transformed little enough by the passage of the years. Thirty years hence, however, finds the United States wet once more and the League of Nations supplanted by a world pact from which America still stands aloof. It is this world pact, however, that causes all the trouble. The tale is concerned with a plot by Japan, Germany and Russia to combine, overwhelm America and dominate the world. Their conspiracy and the struggle of Grant Slattery, a millionaire American secret service agent, to thwart them from the basis for one of Mr. Oppenheim's liveliest yarns. We doubt if there was ever another author who could turn out so great a number of romances and keep them so uniformly entertaining.

Of course, there was the author of "Nick Carter," and the even more obscure creators of "Old King Brady" and "The Liberty Boys of '76" and "Frank Merriwell" and half a dozen other groups of heroes whose exploits were embodied in formats obviously designed for reading behind the protection of geography books. Yet Mr. Oppenheim is better, we think, than any of these, and diverges more frequently from his basic formula than they. There is only one element missing from the pleasure of reading his books. No authority has told us we shouldn't.

It occurs to us, in passing, that the writers of juvenile fiction have become deplorably few, and also, for the most part, plain deplorable, in the last twenty or thirty years. We don't think this impression is due to the vast forward strides our intellect has made in this period. We don't think it would be reminiscence alone that would make us thrill over a story by one of the literary heroes of our childhood. Nor is it, we hope, our arrival at maturity that makes most of the current books for boys that fall into our hands seem not unlike the prepared breakfast foods with which civilisation is afflicted.

We can still enjoy Ralph Henry Barbour, but after him we come to a full stop. There isn't another name we can mention to compare, even humbly, with G. A. Henty, when he gave more attention to his story than he did to pasting up excerpts from a history of the world, or Kirk Munroe, or Howard Pyle. There were giants in those days. Oh, well, probably we're getting old.

And yet, the question troubles us a little. Presently our small son is going to outgrow the Thornton Burgess books, and in all the field of current literature there is little to which we can recommend his attention until he gets old enough to read Dumas and Sabatini. Long ago we abandoned hope of ever being a widely known authority on literature, but we have yearned that we might retain such rank for a while in the eyes of the youngest member of our family.

We can't understand this falling off of books for the eight to fourteen year old mind. The market for them must be quite as large as ever. Persons keep getting born with accustomed regularity, and there are even more United States Senators than there used to be.

And, speaking of legislators and such, the Congress of the United States seems to be carried on in its usual fashion—with the help of God and a few morons.

Fifty years hence, if we are to believe "The Wrath to Come," the Senate will be as obdurate and narrowgauge as it is at present. By then, historians and political reporters will be deploring the conspicuous absence of that great generation of statesmen the couotry enjoyed in the 1920s.

Weak though our knowledge of shipbuilding and navigation may be, we doubt whether even another thirty years will bring about the changes in those arts that Mr. Oppenheim predicts in his novel.

Somehow we cannot quite visualise the scene in which the heroine confronts the treasonable officer of the yacht with a pistol and forces him to go into the chart-house and order the engine room to alter the craft's course.

Still, we are disinclined to quibble. We owe the author of "The Wrath to Come," too many debts. Not only has he resisted the temptation to call his American hero, "Hiram" or "Habakkuk," but he doesn't permit him to say "guess" for "think."

Lymph Gland System Is Guide To Health

Danger Signals Flown When Germs Attack Human Body

BY WOODS HUTCHINSON, A. M., M. D.

Eminent Physician, Whose Articles On Health and Hygiene are Widely Read

The whirligig of time brings strange changes, and there are fashions in disease as well as in dances or dress.

Thirty years ago if any one had spoken of "glands" or "glandular disease," the picture promptly raised in our minds would have been of "scrofulous" swellings of the neck, swathed in red flannel and painted with iodine, or of "kernels" in the armpits, and the "lymphatic temperament."

Today the image called up would be totally different, save that there are still swellings in the neck, and that we take iodine internally for them instead of painting it on externally.

But these swellings are smooth, rounded and painless, and are called goitres, while behind them rise a cloud of invisible and mysterious gland magicians, which, through their hormones or hoodoos, are capable of playing all sorts of eerie tricks with our stature, our looks and even our characters.

THE UNCANNY ENDOCRINES

Thirty years ago as Mr. Dooley said of the Philippines before Admiral Dewey's victory, we "didn't know whither they wur oillands or canned goods."

Today these uncanny endocrines have lit up all the dark corners of the whole field of medicine with their flickering, fireopal, X-Ray lights, and formed already a new specialty in medicine with journals exclusively devoted to it, eagerly followed by scores of enthusiastic endocrinologists.

Not, however, in the spirit of Life's famous gibing definition, "What is the difference between a doctor and a consultant?" "Ten dollars!" "What is the difference between a consultant and a specialist?" "All you've got." But it is not a case of "off with the old glands, on with the new." For in spite of the fact that the endocrines hold the center of the wings and divide the honors of polite conversation in the salons of the intelligentsia with Tutankhamen's latest and the fall of the franc, the modest, retiring glands of our childhood are still doing business at the same old stand in spite of their temporary eclipse.

THE BODY'S "WHITE BLOOD"

Indeed, we should be very badly off if they were not; for, though thrown into the shade beloved of the modest violet, they are as vitally important to our welfare as any one of their endocrine namesakes now in the full blaze of the spotlight.

Insignificant as they may appear and feel in health, these chains of little nodes, or kernels, in the neck, the armpit and the groin, like strings of small irregular-sized beads, are important parts of a complete system of circulation extending all over and round the body, parallel with that of the blood.

A circulation not of the blood, but of a clear, or slightly milky fluid, called lymph, almost exactly the same as blood except that it has no red corpuscles, and hence is sometimes called "white blood."

In fact lymph is chiefly the watery part of the blood which has slipped out of the blood vessels to feed and nourish and cleanse the muscle cells and other tissues; and, having a round trip ticket with choice of routes, decides to return to the heart by another way, through the lymph channels instead of the veins.

DUAL PIPE-LINE SYSTEM

Just why Nature should have laid down two pipeline systems in the body is something of a puzzle. Probably on account of her cautious fondness for always having two strings to her bow, what the engineers call a wide "margin of safety." Almost everything in the body is provided in duplicate in case of breakages, except the food-tube and the heart.

And there is evidence that the heart originally had a double or understudy, for our musical little friend the frog, in addition to his "regular" heart in the chest, has two supernumerary hearts in his pelvis near the lower end of the spine, to drive the lymph round its circuit of the body. So that in spite of his cold-blooded reputation and clammy and goggle-eyed appearance he really not merely "has a heart," but three of them. He surely needs them all to keep up his courage in the cold, clammy ditches and swamps in which he lives. And thus he is of even keener and closer interest to us than as a source of pike-bait, or fried frogs-legs.

BLOCK HOUSES

Having inherited the double pipe-line system Nature proceeds to make the weaker and older line useful in a special way. In addition to picking up harmless "used" blood-serum and returning it to the heart, the lymph channels, or "pipes," seem to have developed a special appetite for collecting poisons and foreign substances, including bacteria, which have found their way into the body, through scratches or cuts or intestinal infections.

Here is where our chains of little lymph-glands, or nodes, come in, for obviously it would not do to pass toxins and bacteria straight on into the heart unchanged. So a series of little blockhouses, or places of detention and quarantine, are built along the course of the lymph-channels to sift out and deal with these dangerous invaders; and behold our lymph-glands, or kernels, in the neck and armpit and groin.

There are hundreds of other lymph-glands in the deeper interior parts of the body policing the lymph-channels from the pelvis, the abdomen and the chest, but these in the neck and groin are the only ones familiar to us because they lie near the surface. They might be described as poison-filters and sponge-traps for bacteria, and the beaded strings of them in neck and armpit, are literal lucky beads, rosarie by which we can commend ourselves to the protection of the Goddess of Health.

THE BACTERIA-EATERS

Now supposing these forts and blockhouses built along the lymph-channels, with what sort of troops shall they be garrisoned? Here Nature makes a wonderfully clever move. She packs all these glands full of mother-cells, which have the power of budding off and breeding white blood-corpuscles, or leucocytes, one of whose specialties is eating up bacteria. So that whenever bands of bacteria are floated in through the watergate of one of these lymph-forts, they are met by a reception committee of enthusiastic young leucocytes, who fall upon them eagerly, each one hoping to treat the invader like the young lady in the famous limerick:

"There was a young lady of Niger
Who went for a ride on a tiger;
They returned from the ride,
The young lady inside,
And a smile on the face of the tiger."

And their hopes are realised probably nine times out of ten, for it has been estimated that not more than one in ten, or nearer one in wenty, of the germs which break into our bodies ever succeed in getting a dangerous foothold.

Then in times of peace, when no invading bacteria or prisoners of war are pouring in, the young leucocytes are simply drafted as fast as they reach military age, and sent floating downstream through the channels to the heart to keep the blood supplied with white corpuscles.

DANGER SIGNALS

For, as all roads lead o Rome, all the lymph-channels run onward toward the capital of the body, uniting finally in one large duct which empties into a great vein close to the heart.

No, if you happen to find some morning that the beads in one of your lymph-rosaries are enlarged and perhaps slightly tender to the touch, you can make a pretty good guess at what has happened.

If in the armpit, look for a festered cut or scratch on the fingers, or an infected burn or scrape on the wrist, or a patch of eczema or other itchy eruption somewhere on the arm. Have your doctor clear these up by proper antiseptic dressings and your glands will soon go back to normal.

If in the groin, look for a neglected or too deeply-pared corn, or an ingrowing toenail, or insect bites, or eczema with varicose veins, or sore of any sort.

Incidentally it may be remarked in illustration that the dreaded Black Death gets its technical name Bubonic Plague from the buboes or frightfully swollen black-and-blue and painful glands in the groin. Due to the fact that the infection enters the body through the bites of rat-fleas on the ankles and legs and is first challenged and held up in its rapid rush toward the heart in this chain of glands.

While the glands in the neck, which drain the whole area of the head, give warning of mischief beginning to burrow into the septum, through ulcers, abscesses and inflammations in nose, throat, gums and teeth, ear and scalp.

Keep your eye (and finger) on the lymph-glands and they will give you a clue to a score of dangers at a stage when prompt, competent attention will work wonders.

ACTRESS HAS TINNEY ARRESTED.

IMOGENE WILSON & FRANK TINNEY.

Frank Tinney, internationally famous black-faced comedian, has been arrested in New York City, charged with felonious assault on Imogene Wilson, beautiful chorus girl in The Follies. She charged that Tinney beat her up in her apartment, and her physician declared she looked as if an automobile had struck her. The girl, who admitted she was desperately in love with Tinney, had previously staged a "suicide" party, but the "poison" she took was a harmless sugar-coated pill.

B.W.A. Activities

HOUSE COMMITTEE

The House Committee acknowledges with grateful thanks a gift of two engravings after MacWhirter from Mrs. Forshaw and three pictures from Mrs. Phillip Peebles.

SPECIAL HOTEL RATES

Those seeking hotel accommodation will be glad to know, that as members of the B.W.A. they can obtain a room in the main building of the Burlington Hotel at the special rate of $110.00 a month from June to October and at $120.00 a month from October to June.

CHILDREN'S BOOKS

Mothers will be interested to learn that Mrs. C. R. Burkill has presented the library at headquarters with a large number of children's books of every kind. These books by well known authors, are suitable for children whose ages range from ten to fifteen years and now the holidays are approaching the young people should have plenty of leisure to avail themselves of this kind gift.

RECREATION SECTION

Through the generosity of Miss Jean Crighton it is hoped to have a set of deck tennis installed at Headquarters during the week-end. Those members who, owing to weather conditions are unable to play tennis or golf, will find this game an excellent substitute and a splendid form of exercise into the bargain.

LOST

Members are notified that a green canvas trunk marked "G.V. Mc'M," which was left at Headquarters last November has been removed. Would the member who took it in error kindly return it as soon as possible as its loss is causing great inconvenience.

Community Church Boating Party To Be Given Today

Splendid accommodations have been obtained for the Community Church boating party which is to leave from the Canton Road jetty at 5:30 this evening. Through the kindness of the Standard Oil Company a tug and a big scow have been obtained. The scow will take care of about 200 people. It is covered over so the party will be held rain or shine.

Miss Henrietta McKeen, chairman of the social committee, has received 100 reservations. Since a bigger boat has been obtained the number that can be accommodated is larger. Special provisions have been made for music. Those coming are asked to bring their own luncheons and cushions. The boat will leave promptly at 5:30.

No British Credit For Soviets Yet

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 25.—In the House of Commons today, Mr. L. R. Lumley (Unionist) asked whether the Russian Government had intimated that it was prepared to place orders in England which would provide work for large numbers of engineering workers if credit facilities were forthcoming. Mr. Willian Lunn, the Secretary of the Department of Overseas Trade, said that he understood that proposals involving the placing of orders in England for manufactures had recently been submitted to the advisory committee under the Trade Facilities Act.

Replying to Commander Kenworthy (Liberal), Mr. Lunn said that the trade facilities scheme had not been extended to the Russian Government at present, but that would not prevent the committee from considering the scheme.
